

archetype; the second is that of GA 1700;¹ if no further MSS are listed, I treat the variant as a singular reading—of the 136 total, at least 54 are singulars, indicating that the copyist was rather careless (it should be obvious that a singular reading cannot be an ‘accumulated error’; it is a private error). But the remaining 82 furnish food for thought. Here is the list, that I have numbered to facilitate subsequent discussion (numbers in bold are singulars):

1. 1:5 σκοτια || σκοτεια [2%] P⁷⁵ C, 579 [this is simply an alternate spelling, and therefore not a proper variant; it recurs at 12:35 and 20:1]
2. 1:18 εις τον κολπον || εν τοις κολποις [] 565 [this one is strange; the two phrases were evidently regarded as synonymous; if a dependency cannot be established, the change was made independently by the two copyists]
3. 1:19 οτε || οταν [a singular, that does not affect the meaning]
4. 1:28 βιθαβαρα || βηθανια [65%] P^{66,75} S A, B, C, W, Θ, 28, 579, 1424 [this is one of the places where 1700 departs from the family; a place name sticks out like a sore thumb, and the variant is the reading of the predominant lectionary type; the monk being used to hearing the variant would naturally change the text]
5. 1:38 λεγεται || λεγετε 553, 1617, 2352 [] W [the forms are virtual synonyms, and the change was presumably made independently; that W also has the change is merely a curiosity]
6. 1:40a ην || 1 δε [2%] A, W, Λ, f¹³, 579, 1424 [the addition is a ‘natural’, and could have happened independently; the meaning is not affected; 1700 agrees with 1424 quite frequently]
7. 1:40b των δυο των ακουσαντων || ~ 3412 [a singular, that does not affect the meaning]
8. 1:42 εμβλενας || 1 δε 1384, 1667 [20%] P⁷⁵ Θ, Λ, f¹³, 1071, 1424 [the addition is a ‘natural’, and could have happened independently; the meaning is not affected]
9. 1:45 ευρηκαμεν || 1 τον [a singular, that does not affect the meaning]
10. 1:50 μειζω || μειζονα [] P⁶⁶ S [presumably the copyist did not have access to either of the early MSS, so this is an independent

¹ For the single example where I list three readings, it is the third one.